knowledge of the Book".

ABSTRACT

The miraculous nature (i'jāz) of the Qur'ān remains perpetually relevant as it has served as definitive proof of Muhammad's (PBUH) prophethood since the advent of his mission (bi'tha). Qur'ānic scholars have identified various aspects of this i'jāz, which is evident in the Book itself: linguistic eloquence (faṣāḥa), substantive depth, and the exceptional character of its Bearer. On the one hand, God presents the evidence for the truthfulness of his Messenger's (PBUH) prophesy in Q. 13:43, saying, "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book." According to both Shi'a and Sunni scholars, the referent of it is Imam 'Ali. Like the Holy Prophet (PBUH), Imam 'Ali possessed comprehensive knowledge of the meanings of the Qur'ān. He was also infallible (ma'ṣūm) in understanding and interpreting Qur'ān. Therefore, after the Prophet (PBUH), he was the foremost exegete being aware of all meanings of the Book. In Nahj al-Balāghah, Imam 'Ali describes manifest (ẓāhir) and esoteric (bāṭin) meanings of Qur'ān, and his interpretations of the Words of God are thought-provoking. The present analytical-descriptive study aimed to find a new aspect of the i'jāz of the Qur'ān based on the testimony of God in the Book, the phrase "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book," and also by determining the meaning of "the knowledge of the Book," while emphasizing the scholarly authority of Imam 'Ali and his testimonies regarding the i'jāz of Qur'ān. By synthesizing these elements, the research establishes Imam 'Ali's definitive role in attesting to the Qur'ān's miraculous nature.

1. Introduction

The belief in the miraculous nature (i'jāz) of the Qur'ān is unanimously affirmed by all Islamic thinkers. However, there have always been disagreements regarding the specific aspects that constitute its i'jāz. For centuries, Qur'ānic scholars have identified various aspects of the Qur'ān's miracle using Qur'ānic evidence, broadly categorized into two types: 1. Linguistic and Semantic i'jāz; 2. i'jāz Concerning Its Bearer.

Linguistic i'jāz Pertains to the Qur'ān's eloquence (faṣāḥah) and rhetorical superiority (balāghah), while the semantic i'jāz encompasses multiple aspects including the absence of contradictions in the Qur'ān (4:82), prophecies of the unseen, and scientific miracles, etc.

The second aspect centers on the Prophet's personality, the Bearer of the Qur'ān. The Prophet's unlettered nature (being ummīyyah)—his lack of formal education—is emphasized in verses such as al-'Ankabūt (29:48) and al-A'rāf (7:157–158).

Although scholars have extensively debated these aspects, a profound understanding of the aspects of Qur'ān's i'jāz requires insights from those who were constant companions of the Prophet (PBUH) and witnessed revelation. Among them, Imam 'Ali's words are invaluable; he witnessed the revelation directly and is universally acknowledged, even by Sunni and non-Muslim scholars, as the most distinguished companion.

The present descriptive-analytical study aims to examine whether, alongside the established aspects of the Qur'ān's i'jāz, an additional aspect can be identified. Given that the Qur'ān is the eternal divine miracle and proof of the Prophet's (PBUH) truthfulness, Q. 13:43 is pivotal. Here, the Almighty God responds to disbelievers' enquiry by invoking His own testimony and stating that "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book" (13:43). In this study, exegesis of Surah Ar-Ra'd 43, first, is examined, identifying the referent of "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book" (13:43) from Shi'a and Sunni perspectives. Then, by analyzing Imam 'Ali's scholarly status and his various interpretations about the Qur'ān's i'jāz, the Prophet's (PBUH) truthfulness is confirmed and a new aspect of the Qur'ān's miracle is demonstrated.

2. Literature Review

Regarding the first part of the study, i.e., Imam 'Ali's testimony to the miraculousness of the Qur'ān, no independent research has been conducted. However, some articles have been written on Imam 'Ali's perspective on the Qur'ān, including:

Zarūndī and Zarūndī (2019). The Qur'ān in the Words of 'Ali, and 'Ali in the Qur'ān's Expression. 'Abd al-Ḥakīm (2000). Reciprocal Expressions of the Qur'ān and the Amīr al-Mu'minīn, and 'Alī Khānī and 'Alawī-Nejād (2000). Imam 'Ali and the Qur'ān.

As for the second part of the study, concerning Q. 13:43, the following research has been conducted:

1. Dārābī and Aḥmadī Aṭhar (2019). A Critical Review of Sunni Exegetes' Views on the Meaning of "The One Who Possesses the Knowledge of the Book."
2. Pūr-Rustamī (2006). Manifestations of Harmonious Truth Between the Qur'ān and 'Ali.
3. Naṣīrī and Naṣīrī (2013). Identifying the Referent of 'The One Who Possesses the Knowledge of the Book.'

These studies have partially addressed the identification of the referent of "the one who possesses the knowledge of the Book" (13: 43). However, the present research focuses on proving the truthfulness of the Prophet's (PBUH) prophecy through the Qur'ān's miracle from Imam 'Ali's perspective, based on two premises: 1. Imam 'Ali is the referent of "the one who possesses the knowledge of the Book" (13: 43); 2. The profound expressions Imam 'Ali articulates regarding the Qur'ān's i'jāz in Nahj al-Balāgha.

3. Discussion

3-1. Analysis of Q. 13:43 from Shi'a and Sunni Perspectives

The disbelievers rejected the Qur'ān, the greatest miracle of the Prophet (PBUH), and demanded other tangible miracles, which was nothing but a mere pretext. That's why the Prophet did not present such miracles, allowing them to deny his Prophethood outright (Khoei, 2004). In response, Allah states in

Q. 13:43: "The faithless say, 'You have not been sent [by Allah].' Say, 'Allah suffices as a witness between me and you, and he who possesses the knowledge of the Book.'"

In jurisprudential terminology, shahādah (testimony) has two possible meanings: Tahammul al-shahādah (bearing witness), Adā' al-shahādah (giving testimony) (Muḥaqqiq Dāmād, 1985, Vol. 3). Tahammul al-shahādah is the act of witnessing an event directly through sensory perception (i.e., seeing and hearing) (Hāshimī Shahrūdī, 2013).

Considering the types of testimony, Allah's testimony in this verse is Adā' al-shahādah, not the another one. Interpreting it as Tahammul al-shahādah would distort the verse's meaning, since Tahammul al-shahādah connotes witnessing, observing, and possessing knowledge of the actual occurrence. It is inconceivable to attribute the matter under discussion, namely, the truth of the Prophets' Prophethood, to ilm al-llāh (divine knowledge) alone, and to consider ilm al-llāh as evidence against the opponents. This is because the adversary has no access to divine ilm al-llāh to see whether the Messenger of Allah (PBUH) correctly claims Prophethood or falsely attributes it to Allah (Ṭabāṭabā'ī, 1996, Vol. 11). Additionally, Adā' al-shahādah mean what the witness knows (either through seeing or hearing). It can be qawlī (spoken testimony) or fi'lī (demonstrative testimony).

Fakhr al-Rāzī argues that Allah's testimony here is fi'lī, arguing that testimony refers to Allah's manifestation of miracles through the Prophet, implying the truthfulness of Prophet's claim; and this is fi'lī, not qawlī, and the highest level of shahādah (Fakhr al-Rāzī, 1999, Vol. 19). However, Nīshābūrī (1995, Vol. 4) argues that this interpretation is incorrect since shahādah, here, is qawlī not fi'lī, because the evidence showing the truthfulness of Muhammad's Prophethood is either the Qur'an itself, being the eternal miracle, or other miracles besides the Qur'an. Surah Ar-Ra'd explicitly rejects the disbelievers' demand for other miracles than the Qur'an. This means no miracle was sent down to them, so it would be illogical for God to testify to Muhammad's (PBUH) Prophethood through a means He Himself has negated. Therefore, God's testimony here refers to citing the Qur'an as evidence; then, relying on the Qur'an is valid because it is the miracle and the sign (āyah) attesting to the truth of the Prophet's mission. In other words, it is the Divine Word that bears witness to the Prophethood of Muhammad (PBHH). Additionally, since the Qur'an belongs to the category of speech (kalām), it becomes clear that God's testimony to His Prophet's (PBUH) Prophethood is qawlī (Ṭabāṭabā'ī, 1996, Vol. 11).

3-2. Shi'a and Sunni Perspectives on Identifying the Referent of "He Who Possesses Knowledge of the Book"

The scholarly authority of the Ahl al-Bayt (AS), particularly Imam 'Ali, is obvious among Shi'a scholars, and acknowledged by many Sunni authorities. Most Shi'a scholars identify Imam 'Ali as the referent of "the one who possesses knowledge of the Book" (13: 43). However, in this research, based on the premise that the testimony of God and "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book" (13:43) is sufficient to prove the i'jāz of the Qur'an, as well as to establish the referent of "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book," and further, emphasizing the scholarly status of Imam 'Ali and the terminology he employed regarding the Qur'an's i'jāz, we aim to uncover another aspect of the Qur'an's miraculousness.

There are also alternative interpretations as follows:

1. Interpretations that consider the "Book" as Preserved Tablet (al-Lawh al-Mahfuz), and Allah as its knower (al-Ṭabrisī, 1993, Vol. 13; al-Ṭūsī, n.d., Vol. 6).
2. Interpretations that consider all Imams (AS), along with Imam 'Ali, as referents of "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book" (al-Ṭabrisī, 1993, Vol. 13; al-Ṭūsī, n.d., Vol. 6).
3. Interpretations that consider the "Book" as either the Qur'an, with Imam 'Ali as being its knower, or Torah and Gospel, with either Jewish or Christian scholars generally being the men of the Book (Ṭabāṭabā'ī, 1996, Vol. 11), or certain believers of the Book such as Abdullah ibn Salam, Salman al-Farsi, and Tamim al-Dari (al-Ṭabrisī, 1993, Vol. 13; al-Ṭūsī, n.d., Vol. 6).
4. Interpretations that consider Gabriel, Imam 'Ali, believers, and Abdullah ibn Salam as referents (Kāshānī, 2002, Vol. 5).

Notably, even in these alternative interpretations, Imam ‘Ali remains the definitive (qadr-e mutayaqqan) referent, being accepted by all Shi’a commentators.

Many Sunni scholars also affirm Imam ‘Ali as the referent of “he who possesses the knowledge of the Book” (Al-Ḥaskānī, 1990, Vol.1; Ibn al-Jawzī, 2001, Vol. 2; Miybūdī, 1992, Vol. 5; Al-Qundūzī, 1995, Vol. 1; Al-Tha‘labī, 2001, Vol. 5), while some have mentioned other referents as well. Alternative Sunni views include:

Interpretations that consider the “Book” as Torah/Gospel, with Jewish/Christian scholars affirming the Prophet as the referents of “he who possesses the knowledge of the Book” (al- Baydāwī, 1997, Vol. 3; al-Baghawī, 1999, Vol. 3; Fakhr al-Rāzī, 1999, Vol. 19). Some also mention individuals such as Abdullah ibn Salam, Tamim al-Dari, and Salman al-Farsi as the referents (Marāghī, n.d., Vol. 13; Al-Māwardī, n.d., Vol. 3). In addition, some exclusively consider Abdullah ibn Salam as the referent (Nasafī, 1995, Vol. 1; al-Ṭabarī, 1991, Vol. 13).

1. Interpretations that reject these opinions in some way do not specify a certain referent, having merely contented themselves with stating the phrase, “Allah knows best” (al-Baghawī, 1999, Vol. 3; Qāsimī, 1997, Vol. 6).

Some argued that Allah Himself is the One who possesses the knowledge of the Book (Fakhr al-Rāzī, 1999, Vol. 9; al-Ṭabarī, 1991, vol. 13; al-Zamakhsharī, 1986, Vol. 2).

3-3. Critical Evaluation of Exegetes Views

First View: the Book as Preserved Tablet, the Knower being Allah

This is improbable as it primarily contradicts the apparent grammatical function of the conjunction (‘atf): that the conjoined phrase (ma ‘tūf) and the phrase it is conjoined to (ma ‘tūf ‘alayhi) should differ. Here, the first phrase has already established divine sufficiency, making a repetition semantically redundant (Ṭabāṭabā’ī, 1996, Vol. 11). As Fakhr al-Rāzī states: “It is incorrect to say, ‘Both Zayd and the jurist testified to this,’ if ‘the jurist’ refers to Zayd himself. Rather, one must say, ‘Zayd the jurist testified.’” (Fakhr al-Rāzī, 1999, Vol. 19).

Secondly, conjoining an adjective (ṣifa) to its referent (dhāt) is erroneous and it is considered inelegant and non-eloquent (ghayr faṣīḥ). Accordingly, Al-Zamakhsharī reinterpreted the phrase [in question] and transformed the first phrase into a descriptive one: “Sufficient is He Who is worthy of worship and He Who possesses the knowledge of the Preserved Tablet—He is the witness between me and you” (al-Zamakhsharī, 1986, Vol. 2). Here, instead of using the term ‘Allāh, which denotes the Divine Essence (dhāt), he employs the descriptive phrase “the One Who is worthy of worship.” However, merely rephrasing an expression, that does not convey a direct meaning, into another form to make it meaningful does not justify claiming that the original expression was correct and semantically valid. For if this argument were accepted, the entire science of linguistic rulings (aḥkām al-alfāz) would be rendered void; every false word could be deemed valid, and every true statement could be invalidated” (Ṭabāṭabā’ī, 1996, Vol. 14, pp. 527-528).

Second View: the Book as Torah/Gospel, the Knowers being (a) Jewish/Christian Scholars or (b) certain referents.

Regarding the first view, this proves untenable for a number of reasons. The Arabic particle “man” (من) in this verse is a relative pronoun (mawṣūla) that can only refer to a single individual. If the intent were to refer to more than one person, the phrases alladhāni (الذَٰنِ) or alladhīna (الَّذِينَ) (The two or those who) would have been used. It is also highly likely that the knowledge referred to in the verse transcends the ordinary, apparent knowledge—such as the knowledge of Āṣif ibn Barkhiyā, which encompasses realms like mastery over hidden secrets (asrār) and the ability to influence ontological affairs (takwīniyāt). A hallmark of his knowledge was the instantaneous retrieval of Queen Bilqīs’s throne from a great distance (Al-Ṭūsī, 1986). If so, the Prophet’s argument (ihtijāj) against the polytheists of Quraysh would be based on the knowledge of the People of the Book (Ahl al-Kitāb). However, this surah was revealed in Mecca, where not a single Jewish or Christian scholar had believed in the Prophet or testified to his Prophethood. It would thus be illogical for the Prophet to base his claim of Prophethood on the testimony of someone who had not, in fact, testified to it (Ṭabāṭabā'ī, 1996, Vol. 11). Had this interpretation been acceptable, the Prophet would be better off citing the polytheists' own arguments, since Qur'ānic miracles had been acknowledged by them and the proof was conclusive against them (Al-Ḥusaynī al-Ṭihrānī, 2005, Vol. 4).

The second view holding that the Referents are specific Jewish/Christian scholars who embraced Islam and testified to the Prophet's Prophethood, such as 'Abdullah ibn Salam, Salman al-Farisi, Jarud, and Tamim al-Dari, is also invalid. Interpreting the verse as referring to 'Abdullah ibn Salam or certain scholars of the People of the Book contradicts historical facts, as all these individuals converted to Islam in Medina, while verse 43 of Surah al-Ra'd was revealed in Mecca. It would make no sense for the Prophet in Mecca to argue with the Quraysh polytheists using the testimony of individuals who would only embrace Islam later in Medina. The Shī'ī exegete, Sa'id ibn Jubayr, when questioned about this verse and whether it referred to 'Abdullah ibn Salam, replied: "How could this be, when this is a Meccan surah and 'Abdullah ibn Salam embraced Islam after the Hijrah in Medina?" (al-Ṭabarī, 1991, Vol. 13; al-Ṭabāṭabā'ī, 1996, Vol. 11).

Notably, the prominent scholar, Sha'bi, stated that no Qur'ānic verse was ever revealed about Abdullah ibn Salam (al-Muẓaffar, 2016, Vol. 2; Al-Shawkānī, n.d., Vol. 3). Interestingly, Abdullah ibn Salam himself identified Imam 'Ali (AS) as the verse's true referent (al-Ḥusaynī al-Mar'ashī, n.d., Vol. 3; al-Qundūzī, 1995, Vol. 2). The Imams (AS), as the true interpreters of Qur'an, in an effort to expose distorted interpretations, consistently emphasized that this verse was revealed about Imam 'Ali (al-'Arūsī al-Ḥuwayzī, 1994, Vol. 2; al-Ḥaskānī, 1990, Vol. 1), while rejecting alternative interpretations as fabrications (al-'Arūsī al-Ḥuwayzī, 1994, Vol. 2; al-'Ayyāshī, 2001, Vol. 2).

Third view (The Preferred View): The intended meaning of "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book" refers to Imam 'Ali.

Shi'a exegesis unanimously affirms Imam 'Ali as the exclusive referent of "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book" (Ṭabataba'i, 1996, Vol. 11; Ṭabrisī, 1993, Vol. 6; al-Tusi, n.d. Vol. 6).

Numerous traditions from Ahl al-Bayt (AS) unexceptionally identify Imam 'Ali as the verse's cause of revelation (al-'Ayyāshī, 2001, Vol. 2; al-Bahrānī, 1995, Vol. 2; Fayḍ al-Kāshānī, 1994, Vol. 3; Ṣaffār, 1983), while ample traditions include other Imams (AS) as well.

Numerous narrations indicate that the phrase "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book" refers to Imam 'Ali and the Imams of Guidance (AS). These narrations do not imply exclusivity, rather they point to their specific and most perfect manifestations. Therefore, applying this verse to the Imams (AS) is flawless (al-'Arūsī al-Ḥuwayzī, 1994, Vol. 1; al-'Ayyāshī, 1960, Vol. 2; Al-Bahrānī, 1995, Vol. 2).

In his commentary on this verse, Allamah Ṭabāṭabā'ī emphasizes that this noble verse was revealed concerning Imam 'Ali and that the narrations on this matter are confirmed. Therefore, if the phrase "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book" is applied to those who believed in the Messenger of God (AS), it will undoubtedly apply to 'Ali as well. This is because, as attested by numerous authentic narrations, he was the most knowledgeable in the Book of God among the entire Muslim Ummah. Even if none of those narrations existed, the Hadith al-Thaqalayn, transmitted through both Shi'a and Sunni people, would suffice as proof for this claim (Ṭabāṭabā'ī, 1996, Vol. 11).

This is neither hidden nor unknown to many Sunni scholars. They identify Imam 'Ali as the referent of "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book." Among them, al-Ḥākim al-Ḥaskānī, in his exegesis Shawāhid al-Tanzīl, cites through numerous narrations that Imam 'Ali is exclusively the referent (al-Ḥaskānī, 1990, Vol. 1). Similarly, al-Tha'labī, in his commentary on this verse, provides examples indicating that the verse's sole referent is Imam 'Ali (AS) (al-Tha'labī, 2001, Vol. 5. See also Ibn al-Jawzī, 2001, Vol. 2; al-Ṭabrisī, 1991, Vol. 13; al-Nasafī, 1995, Vol. 1).

3-4. The Scholarly Status of Imam 'Ali

Both allies and adversaries agree that Imam 'Ali possessed peerless eloquence. This is evident in his sermons, letters, and wise sayings. A meticulous study of his life in both Shi'a and Sunni texts clearly substantiates this claim. As Dhahabī writes: "'Ali was an ocean of knowledge with powerful reasoning, sound deduction, mature intellect, and penetrating insight into truths!" (al-Dhahabī, 2002, Vol. 1, p. 89).

Reviewing reliable Sunni narrational sources regarding Imam ‘Ali and his scholarly status reveals that “The Prophet (PBUH) said: I am the city of knowledge, and ‘Ali is its gate. The Prophet (PBUH) also said: ‘Ali is with the Qur’ān, and the Qur’ān is with ‘Ali.” (Ibn Hajar al-‘Asqalānī, 1970, Vol. 2, p. 155; Nishābūrī, 1990, Vol. 3, p. 126).

Moreover, Ibn Abī al-Ḥadīd, in the prolegomena to his Sharḥ Nahj al-Balāghah, elucidates the preeminent position of ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib (AS) within Islamic studies, asserting:

The Qur’ānic exegesis (tafsīr) derives its foundational principles from his teachings. A cursory examination of the exegetical works substantiates this claim, as the majority of transmitted narrations are narrated through his chain of transmission and that of ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Abbās; his scholarly symbiosis with the Imam ‘Ali and learning from him is attested. When Ibn ‘Abbās was asked regarding the comparative scope of his knowledge against his cousin, he responded: “like a raindrop measured against the boundless ocean!” (Ibn Abī al-Ḥadīd, 1918, Vol. 1, P. 19).

Elsewhere he writes:

“...His words are truly inferior to the Creator's speech yet superior to the creation's speech. The merit of his words is evident in that all orators learned rhetoric and all writers acquired their style from him. It suffices to say that neither one-tenth nor even one-twentieth of what people have collected and preserved of ‘Ali's words has been narrated from any companion of the Messenger of God (PBUH), despite the presence of eloquent speakers among them.” (Ibn Abī al-Ḥadīd, 1918, Vol. 1, pp. 24-25).

Furthermore, in many Sermons of Nahj al-Balāgha, Imam ‘Ali himself refers to his scholarly status. For instance, in the Shiqshiqiyya Sermon, he affirms his qualifications through two attributes: “Knowledge reaches people through me” and “No advanced thought can attain my scholarly rank.” He has employed these two qualities as metaphors to describe himself (Ibn Miyytham al-Baḥrānī, 1943, Vol. 1, p. 497).

3-5. The Testimony of Imam ‘Ali on the Qur’ān’s i’jāz

Imam ‘Ali devoted his entire life to establish, preserve, and correctly understand the Qur’ān in its comprehensive meaning and true structure (Dilshād-e Tehrānī, 2010).

Surah Ar-Ra’d (13:43) reveals that if you yourselves cannot discern [the truth], then Imam ‘Ali’s testimony to the Prophet’s (PBUH) truthfulness, through demonstrating the Qur’ān’s i’jāz, suffices. In Sermon 122 of Nahj al-Balāgha, Imam ‘Ali explicitly declares his constant companion with Qur’ān, stating: “The Qur’ān is with me, I have been its companion since I have embraced it, never parting from it.” In Sermon 125, he emphasizes the need for Qur’ānic interpreters: “This Qur’ān is a written text between two covers. It does not speak by itself. It requires interpreters, men interpret it.”

3-5-1. Testimony to the Qur’ān’s Truthfulness Due to Its Comprehensive Knowledge (Reports of Past and Future Events)

The disclosure of unseen events (ikhbār al-ghayb) is one aspect of the Qur’ān’s i’jāz. The Noble Qur’ān has predicted future events in some of its verses, with all the reports proving true after a while without a single discrepancy. These predictions are the enduring witnesses to the truth of the Qur’ān’s miraculous nature.

Some scholars categorized unseen reports into three temporal dimensions: past, present, and future (e.g., Ma’rifat, 1991, Vol. 4). Others, however, consider only future-related prophecies as evidence of the Qur’ān’s i’jāz (e.g., Khoei, 2004).

In Sermon 158 of Nahj al-Balāgha, Imam ‘Ali states: “Ask the Qur’ān to speak to you, but the Qur’ān will never speak. Instead, I will inform you of it. Know that within the Qur’ān lies the knowledge of the future, the narratives of the past, the cure for your ailments, and the order (nizām) for your life.”

Here, Imam ‘Ali commands people to ask Qur’ān to speak; then, he interprets his own statement by directing them to hear the Qur’ān’s speech from himself, for he is the tongue of God’s Book and the Sunna. By saying that “the Qur’ān will never speak,” he dispels the misconception of those who were astonished and skeptical of his instruction to demand speech from the Qur’ān. He then declares that the knowledge of earlier people, the narratives of past generations, awareness of future events and tribulations, the conditions of the Resurrection, and the cure for your ailments all are contained within the Qur'an (Ibn Miytham al-Bahrānī, 1943).

3-5-2. Testimony to the Qur'an's i'jāz Due to Its Absence of Discrepancy, Inconsistency, or Deviation

One aspect of the Qur'an's i'jāz, which the Qur'an itself highlights (Q. 4:82), is the complete absence of contradiction within it.

Imam 'Ali's (AS) testimonies on the Qur'an's consistency could be found in three Sermons: In Sermon 18, he states:

Allah says: "We have not neglected anything in this Book" (6:38) and "In it is the clarification of all things" (16:89). Moreover, some parts of the Qur'an confirm others, and there is no discrepancy within it, "Had it been from [someone] other than Allah, they would have surely found much discrepancy in it." (4:82).

In Sermon 133, he declares:

It is the Book of Allah, through which you see, speak, and hear the truth. Some parts of it interpret others, and some parts testify to others. It contains no contradiction in the religion of Allah, nor does it lead its followers astray from Him.

In Sermon 156, he emphasizes its lack of awry and deviation, saying "no awry enters it to require straightening, nor does it go wrong so as to need correction."

3-5-3. Testimony to the Qur'an's Truthfulness Due to Its Profound and Vast Knowledge

Imam 'Ali describes the depth and vastness of the Qur'an's knowledge while mentioning its unique characteristics in Sermon 198, stating: "An ocean whose depths cannot be comprehended." This statement refers to the hidden mysteries (asrār) and subtle sciences (daqā'iq al-'ulūm) contained within the Noble Qur'an, knowledge that transcends human thought and is accessible only to the elect of the divine court (Makārim Shīrāzī, 1996, Vol. 7).

He further elaborates: "It is a spring of knowledge and the seas of it are a garden of justice." It is an ocean whose depths cannot be measured. The term "ocean" (baḥr) is a metaphor for Qur'an in two perspectives: First, the depth of its mysteries, just as one cannot reach the bottom of a vast ocean, human intellects and thoughts are incapable of fully encompassing the Qur'an's secrets or grasping the depths of its meanings and objectives; second, Qur'an as a mine of precious knowledge and virtues, much like the ocean as a source of priceless pearls (Ibn Miytham al-Bahrānī, 1943, Vol. 3; Khoei, 2004, Vol. 12).

3-5-4. The Eternal Continuity and Immortality of Qur'anic Knowledge

In Sermon 189, Imam 'Ali identifies the eternal continuity of Qur'anic knowledge as another dimension of the Qur'an's i'jāz, describing it in awe-inspiring terms:

Thus, He revealed the Qur'an to him, a light whose lamps are never extinguished, a flame whose radiance never diminishes, an ocean whose depths cannot be comprehended, a path whose traveler never goes astray, and a glare whose illumination is never overcome by darkness.

In Sermon 133, he further emphasizes: 'The Book of Allah is among you, as a speaker whose tongue never falters, a house whose pillars never crumble, and a victor whose supporters are never defeated.'

3-5-5. Testimony to the Qur'an's Truthfulness Through the Divine Manifestation in It

In Sermon 147, Imam 'Ali states: "Thus, Allah the Exalted revealed Himself to His servants through His Book without them being able to see Him, through what He has shown them of His power and what He has warned them of His wrath."

Allamah Ja'farī (1987, Vol. 24, p. 193), in his commentary on this Sermon, elaborates:

The verses of the Noble Qur'an speak of existence and its phenomena in such a way that no informant except the Creator of existence could convey such knowledge. On the other hand, the divine words in the Qur'an regarding the decline and destruction of societies are so clear and evident that any discerning and rational individual, by studying and reflecting upon them, observes the order and lawfulness of existence and becomes certain that for every revolving entity, there is a revolving force behind it.

3-5-6. Testimony to the Qur'ān's Truthfulness Based on Its Disclosure of Scientific Truths

Another aspect of the Qur'ān's i'jāz in Imam 'Ali's teachings is its disclosure of scientific truths. The Qur'ān contains references to marvels in human and cosmic creation that were unknown at the time of revelation, which have subsequently been confirmed by modern empirical sciences. While explaining such matters is not the primary purpose of the Divine Book, it, nevertheless, unveils the mysteries of creation to demonstrate God's oneness, power, omniscience, and the purposeful design of existence, thereby directing our attention to the signs in the horizons and within ourselves (Ruknī Yazdī, 2000). Imam 'Ali (AS) repeatedly refers to these truths in Nahj al-Balāgha. For example, in Sermon 18, he states: "the Qur'ān's outward form is beautiful, and its inward meaning is profound and inconceivable. Its wonders are infinite, and its marvels have no end. Darkness (i.e., ignorance) cannot be dispelled from the path of life except by the Qur'ān."

The distinction between the two phrases, i.e., "its wonders are infinite" and "its marvels have no end," may be that the first phrase indicates the eternal and everlasting nature of the Qur'ān's wonders, beauties, and outstanding truths, since there were many books that were astonishing in their time but lost their luster over time. In contrast, the second refers to the Qur'ān's hidden mysteries that are progressively unveiled over time, with new aspects being revealed continuously (Makārim Shīrāzī, 1996, Vol. 1, p. 620).

3-5-7. Testimony to the Qur'ān's I'jāz in Its Guidance

In his eloquent discourses, Imam 'Ali expresses various aspects of the Qur'ān's i'jāz. However, his explicit emphasis on the Qur'ān's role as a guide (hādī) requires particular reflection. In various Sermons, he highlights the Qur'ān's guiding nature; for example, "The Qur'ān is the Book of Guidance" (Sermon 160), "Know that this Qur'ān is an adviser whose counsel is free from deceit, a guide that never leads astray" (Sermon 175), "Allah the Exalted revealed a guiding Book, in which He clarified virtues and vices" (Sermon 166), and "It is a path whose traveler never goes astray... a guidance for whoever follows it" (Sermon 189), etc.

The use of the term "minhāj" in Sermon 189 refers to the Qur'ān. Considering that minhāj means a clear, luminous, and straight path whose travelers never go astray, those who follow this manifest path and divine straight way (al-ṣirāṭ al-mustaqīm) will never fall into misguidance (Makārim Shīrāzī, 1996, Vol. 7).

4. Conclusion

There is a consensus among Shi'a scholars and a majority of Sunni scholars that "he who possesses the knowledge of the Book" (Q. 13:43) refers to Imam 'Ali. The Messenger of God (PBUH), by divine command, addressed the disbelievers who rejected the Qur'ān and his Prophethood, stating: "Allah suffices as a witness between me and you, and he who possesses the knowledge of the Book." In other words, the best and most sufficient witness between me and you regarding the truth of my Prophethood and the Qur'ān's divine origin is the Sacred Essence of the Lord and the testimony of the one who possesses knowledge of the Book, the one who is deeply learned in the Qur'ān, and fully aware of its manifest and hidden truths.

The narratives from Ahl al-Bayt (AS) unanimously affirm that this verse was revealed concerning Imam 'Ali. Therefore, it can be concluded that Imam 'Ali's testimony is sufficient to prove the Qur'ān's i'jāz.

In his Sermons, Imam 'Ali repeatedly emphasized the Qur'ān's miraculous nature, explaining various aspects of its i'jāz, including 1. comprehensive knowledge (encompassing past and future events), 2. absence of discrepancy, deviation, or distortion, 3. profound and expansive teachings, 4. Eternal continuity and immortality of its wisdom, 5. divine manifestation within its verses, 6. disclosure of scientific truths, and 7. guidance as its fundamental purpose.

Therefore, Imam 'Ali's testimony to the Qur'ān's i'jāz, as one of its definitive proofs, is firmly established based on verse 43, surah Ar-Ra'd, and his elucidations on the Qur'ān's miraculous aspects in Nahj al-Balāgha.
